WIND.

'TIS AN ILL WIND THAT BLOWS NOBODY GOOD.

THE blast that a few of our citizens endeavored to give the paper of some of the unchartered banks; has blown a fine quantity of it in OUR HANDS. Since our last weeks accommodating notice, we have sold goods very fast, and are still glad to receive the bank-notes mentioned in our advertisement. Notwithstanding our large sales, we have yet a good assortment—and any goods that we have not, we will take pleasure in directing our customers to many stores where they receive the same kind of money as we do; but are afraid to make it so public, for reasons too well known to those who have accommodations in the banks of this place.

WILLIAM HILL.

Pittsburgh, January 6, 1817. 2aw-tIF.

JAMES A. LEE,

PROPRIETOR of that large and commodious establishment in Howard-street, Baltimore, respectfully informs the citizens of the U. States, at large, and those of the western country particularly; that his house is fitted up in a manner which will ensure to all those disposed to favor him with their patronage, the best accommodation in every respect. The reason why he addresses himself to those of the western country particularly, is that he has long lived in that portion of the union, and he flatters himself that he is remembered by many persons in that quarter.

Country merchants and persons travelling on business, who stop at his house, may always rely on the most accurate information relative to the state of the market and all mercantile proceedings.

The conveniencies of his establishment are numerous, he has near one hundred rooms neatly fitted up as chambers, where persons may be quite retired from noise and bustle—he has also some rooms elegantly furnished with large double beds, where gentlemen can be accommodated. As he considers a good clean bed one of the greatest luxuries, he has taken great pains to place in that department, maids who pay the strictest attention to the cleanliness of the sheets, and to have them well dried and aired.

His table is provided with a profusion of the best poultry, meats and vegetables, that the market affords, and active and attentive waiters who anticipate even the very wishes of his guests.

He regularly imports the Choicest Liquors.

His Madeira wine not only amateurs but connoiseurs, have pronounced the best they have ever tasted in this country, and he assures the public that it is not unfrequently the case, that he has to supply from his vaults, "London particular," to gentlemen who are determined to treat their friends with the best.

The stable attached to the establishment, he has no hesitation in pronouncing the best in the U. States—the hostlers are attentive and faithful, and have been brought up to the business—the best oats and hay selected, and none other than such as the proprietor inspects, is ever admitted into his granary

Of his establishment in general, he conceives he has spoken no more than will be fully justified on visiting his house

Mere words are often vain and weak,
Come try—it for itself shall speak.

Pledging himself to be alive to all the interests and conveniencies of his guests, he solicits the patronage of his fellow citizens.

EGYPT.

Letters of a very recent date, give the following details respecting Egypt:

"The country has greatly improved under the government of Pacha Amoud Ali. The city of Alexandria has been placed in a state of defence; the troops are well treated and regularly paid; and more volunteers offered themselves than are wanted. Amoud Ali is in his 40th year. He was originally an adventurer, who exercised the trade of piracy in a small vessel; his success attracted to him, 600, with whose assistance he succeeded in domineering over the chief cities of Lower Egypt:—since which time his army has greatly increased. He caresses foreigners, particularly the French and English, and there is every probability that, if he continues to govern Egypt, it will become a very flourishing country."

FROM A LATE LONDON PAPER.

Anecdote of Lord Castlereagh.

In the year 1787, as the present Lord Castlereagh, then Mr. Stewart, was enjoying the pleasures of an aquatic excursion with his school fellow and friend, Mr. Sturrock, near Castle-Stewart, the seat of his Lordship's father, the Earl of Londonderry, unaccompanied by any other person, a violent squall of wind upset the boat at the distance of two miles from the shore. Lord Castlereagh, who was an excellent swimmer, recollecting that Mr. Sturrock could not swim, immediately on the boat sinking, directed his attention to his friend, swam to him, placed a piece of a broken oar under his breast recommended him with the most encouraging composure and presence of mind to remain as long as he could on his back, which he showed him how to effect by placing himself in that position. He continued swimming near his friend, occasionly raising his hands, in the hope that some one might discover their perilous situation. Mr. Sturrock, father to the young friend of Lord Castlereagh, and Mr. Clealandi, his Lordships tutor, had been looking at the boat previous to the squall, from which they had taken shelter in a temple in the garden at Mount Stewart. Upon the storm subsiding, these gentlemen quitted the place immediately missed the boat, & concluded that she was lost. Most providentially, they found in the harbour a small boat, into which they sprung with feelings which it would be in vain to describe, and after rowing with all their vigour for a mile and a half, they at last discovered, as the waves rose and fell, a hat, and not far from it a hand waving; they redoubled their exertions, and came up to Lord Castlereagh, who implored them not to mind him, but instantly go to his companion.—"Never mind me," said his Lordship, "for God's sake go to Sturrock, or he will be lost!—leave me, I think I can support myself untill you return," They accordingly left him, and arrived at the critical moment, when his young friend had just risen, after sinking the first time, and seizing him by the hair, they drew him, quite senseless and exhausted, into the boat—another minute, and all would have been over.—They then returned to his Lordship, and rescued him also. It is impossible to describe the alternate agony and joy which characterized the whole of this awful and impressive scene.

It is not generally known that the extraordinary perseverance which was the feature most remarkably displayed in Timour's character, during a fifty years continued series of battles, was excited first by an incident almost similar to that which in a better cause encouraged Robert Bruce to similar exertions. "I once," said Timour, "was forced to take shelter from my enemies in a ruined building, where I sat alone many hours. Desiring to divert my mind from my hopeless condition, I fixed my observation on an ant that was carrying a grain of corn larger than itself up a high wall, I numbered the efforts it made to accomplish this object. The grain fell sixty nine times to the ground; but the insect persevered and the seventieth time it reached the top of the wall. This sight," said Timour, "gave me courage at the moment: and I have never forgot the lesson it conveyed."

A DRAWN BET.

To landsmen it is almost incredible with how great precision sailors can distinguish any particular vessel even at a considerable distance, from the midst of a fleet, which appears to the eye of a common observer, composed of ships all exactly alike. A remarkable instance of this kind of knowledge occured a short time ago:—Two Captains of merchant ships were walking together towards one of the harbours of Plymouth, in which their respective vessels were at that time lying. Suddenly one of them stopped and exclaimed, "Bless my soul! did I not hear that the Nancy, of Hull, was wrecked upon the North coast!"—"That she certainly was, (replied the other,) for I was within a cable's length of her at the time she struck."—"It can't be, (rejoined the first,) I can see her mainmast at this moment;—she is now lying the third ship from the harbour's mouth." "Phoo! you are blind," ejaculated the second. "I'll bet you a guinea of it," cried the first. "I should only be imposing on you to take your bet, (answered the other,) for, as I told you before, I saw her perish, and know it to be impossible." His companion, still persisted in this opinion, and forced upon him the bet. They proceeded to the harbour, and the moment they arrived there, made their inquiries. The result of which was, that they found the Nancy, of Hull, had been wrecked, but that her mainmast had been preserved and erected in this other vessel now lying in the harbour: and it had been from his knowledge of the mainmast, that the proposer of the wager had been actuated in lying it. The bet was of course drawn.

On the 5th of Nov. ult. after an adjournment of a year the Diet of the Germanick Confederation, was opened at Frankfort. The event was announced by the discharge of 101 cannon and the ringing of all the bells of the city. The Diet is composed of ministers of all the German Confederation, including Austria and Prussia, for the parts of the Germanic Empire belonging to them, Great Britian for Hanover, and the Netherlands for the Grand Duchy of Luxembourgh. Each of these powers is entitled to one vote in the Diet—the whole number being 15—the Austrian delegation presides.

The fact has been proven before the Asiatic society, that the Bhatta tribe, in the island of Sumatra, make a practice of eating their prisoners of war. It is derived from Capt. Canning who was employed on a diplomatic mission to that island.

From the Allegheny Magazine.

BURNING SPRINGS.

About three quarters of a mile east of Putland, on Lake Erie, is a small stream, which, in the lapse of time, has worn an irregular trough, of ten or fifteen feet in depth, and of greater width, into a body of soft argillaceous Slate. At the bottom of this trough in a situation of romantic scenery, about sixty rods from the Lake, there are several apertures, from which continually issues an inflammable gas. The writer of this article lately visited this spot, at a time when there was but little water in the brook. He found one of the apertures covered with a flame eighteen inches high; and by putting a blaze to two or three other apertures, the gas immediately caught and flashed like spirits of wine. The heat is sufficient to make water boil. The stones placed about the spring found on fire, were nearly red hot. At one of these apertures, a circular hole of about one quarter of an inch in diameter, a current of air, like that from the nose of a bellows, was constantly emitted. —A strong scent is perceived in approaching these gaseous springs, not unlike that which issues from a foaming pit coal.

PRINCETON COLLEGE.

We are very much concerned to learn, that a most serious disturbance, took place a few days since among the Students at Princeton College. As far as we have been able to ascertain, it threatens the total dissolution of that distinguished Seminary, from whose Academic walls so many luminaries of our country, in science, religion and politics have emanated, shedding lustre upon its name. From some unfortunate misunderstanding between the Professor, Teachers and Students, it appears, the latter almost in a body, revolted, and by force drove their Superiors, from the College apartments; and committed great violence on the building. We understand that nearly eighty of these inconsiderate young gentlemen have already reached this city on their way home, abandoning their Collegiate duties, and obligations. With our present limited information we forbear further remark on the unpleasant occurrence; only hoping, that a returning sense of duty on the part of his students, added to the decided indignation of their parents and guardians, will, even yet, rescue this celebrated institution from so shameful a dissolution. Relf.

Effects of Drunkenness.—On the night of the 17th inst. five men, having staid in a tavern, in Baltimore, till they were much intoxicated, stumbled into the Bason, and three of them were drowned. One of them had a wife and children.

To Young Men—An Extract.

"To pass through life with any degree of honour to himself, the young man on his first entrance into the world should make choice of proper company. It is not enough that his principles be of the right kind, neither is it sufficient that his mind is pure, and his intentions right. His associates must be among the wise, and his companions selected from among the excellent of the earth. Vices are infectious, and the purest principles are liable to be corrupted. The company of the profane swearer, the liar, the drunkard, and the impure is extremely dangerous. When vice becomes familiarized to our view we lose the abhorrence of it almost insensibly, and though we may still appear to walk in the path of obedience, yet we gradually recede from virtue, and by a continuance in such courses we soon are prepared to commit downright wickedness. But this is not all. The wise and prudent will even shun the society of him whose associates are among the vilest of the vile. But there is yet a kind of intercourse with the world which ever tends to lessen a young man in the opinion of men of pure lives and nice sentiments of honour and propriety. This is a spirit of accommodation to the low and vulgar. A courteous deportment towards all is undoubtely commendable, for all may justly lay claim to common civility and good offices but no one is under obligations to receive as bosom companions the ignorant, the profligate, or the vicious. The sober and discreet man will not often visit him who is ever surrounded with the refuse of the earth, neither will a man of good sense and delicacy trust himself among the brawlers of the streets.

These considerations should induce those who are forming their characters to erect a standard of company and conversation and while they are solicitous to treat all with respect, beware of lessening their own value in the opinion of men of virtue and understanding. Let them equally avoid that haughty and distant carriage which most assuredly will bring contempt, and by a life regulated by the precepts of unerring wisdom, and proper sentiments of honor and dignity, secure to themselves the friendship of the virtuous and the approbation of their own consciences.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1817.

The celebrated Compensation Law has been finally disposed of in the House of Representatives. It has been agreed, says the National Register, to pass a repeal of that law, which shall take effect after the fourth of March next, and leave the next congress to settle their own pay—that is, they have left matters, as to all material purposes, in the same condition as at the beginning of this session, after occupying above one eighth of the session about the subject—

"Just as the hare, when hounds and horns pursue, Pants to the place from whence at first she flew."

Deaf and Dumb in New-York.

The committee appointed to inquire the number of Deaf and Dumb in the city of New York, have reported that 47 persons of that description have been ascertained to be in the city, 34 of whom, at least, are between the ages of 6 and 18, and are capable of instruction. Some of these were not born deaf, but were deprived of their hearing either in infancy, or after they had learned the use of speech.

The persons of the latter description have gradually become mutes, from being rendered incapable of hearing and imitating the voices of others. The committee recommend that measures be immediately taken to establish a school for their instruction in New-York.

Fabrication—The Catskill Recorder states that the article published sometime ago relating that a woman had stopped a few moments at a tavern in Freehold, Green County, and exchanged her own BLACK child for the landlady's WHITE one, and successfully eluded pursuit, is a sheer fabrication, "circulated either for the gratification of the newsmongers or the astonishment of the credulous.

In an article in the National Register, it is stated that one of the Banks of the District of Columbia, is receiving interest upon fifteen hundred thousand dollars, bottomed upon a capital of three hundred thousand—and that in one of the Ohio Banks, for one half year, a dividend of twenty five per cent was declared due to the stockholders on their paper capital.

The Virginia House of Delegates have passed a bill creating twenty four new Banks, with an aggregate capital of 7,266,000.

DIVORCE LAWS.

During the French Revolution, the marriage contract became almost a nullity, there being one hundred and eighty-eight legitimate causes for divorce. This fact was recently stated in the Virginia Legislature, when a bill for a divorce was under discussion.—The following is an extract from the debate:—

"Mr. Tucker observed that it would be generally impossible to decide which is the suffering party.—The gentleman from Loudon had mentioned the authority of Dr Smith (president of Princeton college)—he would oppose to him the authority of Hume, who had so ably discussed the impolicy of divorces.—He was sensible that Milton had written on the subject; but what was the cause? He happened to have a yoke-fellow not to his taste.

"Mr. Blackburn spoke against divorces in general, but there were cases of a desperate kind where he would grant relief: and not in all cases tie together the tiger and the lamb, the eagle and the dove; the practice once used of tying a dead carcase to a criminal till the bones rotted, was nothing compared with the misery of some unions."

A Paris paper states that there were none or very few trials for treason or sedition in France: and no attempts to annoy the 38 banished Buonapartists. The asylum of Lavellette was known, but no attempts had been made to apprehend him.—

CAPTAIN BLAKELY.

The best authority enables me to state, says the Editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) Star, that several of our officers, now in the Mediterranean have made the most careful investigation respecting the disappearance of the Wasp; and that no doubt remains in their mind of Blakely being the commander who encountered the British frigate, which put into Cadiz, sometime in September, 1814, dreadfully shattered. It will be remembered, that the Wasp captured the Reindeer, on the 28th of June, 1814. After putting into L'Orient, for repairs &c. She set sail on the 27th of August, and on the 1st of September, encountered a convoy of 10 sail, in charge of the Armada, 74, and succeeded in cutting off one ship. The same evening she dicovered four vessels, two on each bow; & successively encountered two of these, brigs. The first of them struck after a severe engagement, but the second approached too speedily to permit the Wasp to take possession of her prize. The circumstance of there being no other American vessel near that latitude at the time, and the action with the British frigate taking place a few nights afterwards, with the report of the enemy, that though the night was calm, there was no appearance of the adversary in the morning, leave little room in the mind of our officers, to doubt that the Wasp had another battle early in September, and that she fought the frigate, until so disabled as to fall off and sink! These we confess, are our impressions and we consider this action as one of the most illustrious exploits performed by any of the officers of our navy. North-Carolina, then, has cause to be proud of her distinguished son, yet to weep bitter tears, that he has been cut off in the morning of his fame, from the service of an admiring nation.

The Canadian Courant of the 4th inst. states that about twenty American sleighs loaded with provisions had been stopped at the Custom house of St. Johns. The proclamation of the Governor, for admitting provisions, having ceased, they are in consequence forfeited.

The Earl of Selkirk and his suite, have been arrested at Fort Williams, on warrants issued by the executive of Upper Canada.

Despatches are said to have been received from Mr. Pinkney, by an arrival from Naples. The nature and complexion of any communication from that quarter, we have every reason to infer, are not of a favorable character. We require, however, no further proof of the friendship of his Neapolitan majesty than the knowledge that he has imposed a quarantine of forty days on all American vessels coming from any port in the United States or Gibraltar. This it may be said, almost shuts the door to any commercial acquaintance. Wash. Gaz.

A company of London proprietors have obtained permission from the French government to run a line of English stage coaches from St. Denis to Paris. Four coaches, with English coachmen, harness, &c. have been sent over to France.

Bellows' Falls, Vermont, January. 20.

SNOW STORM, ACCOMPANIED WITH LIGHTNING.

The night of the 17th inst. was rendered remarkable by very heavy thunder, and lightning, uncommonly vivid. In this vicinity, these phenomena, occurred about 12 o'clock at night. A moist snow accompanied with hail, fell at the time, and but little if any rain. We are informed that the new Meeting-House in Fitzwilliam, (N. H.) was consumed by lightning in this storm, and that the dwelling house of Major Robinson, of the same town, was set on fire by lightning but happily extinguished.

Miseries of Editors.—1. Having a letter through the Post-Office, charged with double-postage, which has the appearance of containing money long due from distant subscribers, but, when opened, proves to contain a very ingenious communication from some indefatigable and persevering correspondent.

2. Having carefully read and revised proof sheets, and left every thing in good order and well conditioned—to find, the next day, the publick laughing at some ludicrous errour which has arisen from an accident that could not be forseen or guarded against.

3. Having prepared a long article and got it nearly ready for the press—to find that the news which occasioned it proves to be unfounded, or that the facts on which it was grounded are materially different from what was supposed.

4. To hear the complaints of the various sorts of readers—of the ladies (our compliments to them) when they find no poetry or marriages; of the men, because they find so much trash; of the farmer, because we pay no more attention to the subjects of raising grain and fattening cattle; of the partizan, because we do not oftener hit the demos; and of the politician, because we have to record so few revolutions of empire, and have so little to say of "guns and drums and wounds," when in spite of us the world are determined to remain at peace.

These may serve as a sample of the whole. We will warrant the lot to be of equal quality.—Worcester Spy.

The unexampled dispatch which the collected wisdom of the nation, in Washington assembled, make of public business, reminds us of an anecdote that we once heard of a Maryland planter. This gentleman was extremely kind and indulgent to his slaves, and whenever they offended him would threaten much and do nothing. His slaves taking advantage of his growling good nature, would use their own free will in working upon his plantation and do as little as the urgency of the case required. One day he summoned nine of his slaves to give an account of the work which they had done; they accordingly attended and were thus questioned: Well Peter, what have you been doing?—Grubbing, sir. John, and what have you been doing?—Grubbing, sir. Andrew, and what have you been doing?—Grubbing, sir. Thomas, and what have you been doing?—Grrubbing, sir. Dick, what have you been doing?—Grubbing, sir: In short, James, George and William, had all been very industriously employed in grubbing. Well Peter, what mattock did you make use of?—I used my own mattock, sir. John, what mattock did you make use of?—I borrowed—I borrowed Peter's mattock, sir. Andrew, what mattock did you make use of?—I—I—borrowed Peter's mattock sir. Thomas, what mattock did you make use of?—I—I—I—I borrowed Peter's mattock, sir: and Dick, James, George and William were found on examination to have borrowed the mattock of Peter. Well Dinah, you are a good girl; and what have you been doing?—I sir, why I have been busily employed the whole day in picking up the grubs.—Surely the men in congress can have no objection to a parallel of this kind; they acknowledge themselves the servants of the people—nay, they say more; they declare themselves bound by their instructions, which certainly comes nearer to the definition of a slave than that of an ordinary servant!—Verily, gentlemen ye have all been grubbing—Fed. Rep.

Mahlon Dickerson, Esq. at present governor of New Jersey, was on Thursday, in joint meeting of the Legislature unanimously elected a Senator of the United States, for 6 years from the 4th of March 1817.

Cannon of Oliver Cromwell

An anecdote is recorded of Oliver Cromwell, which by a single incident illustrates the fanaticism of those times and the character of the man who was able to turn it to so good an account—It being usual to place inscriptions on large artillery, the following words were inserted upon some of the cannon belonging to the Commonwealth, at the period when the Puritan superstition was at its height; "O Lord open thou our lips and our mouths shall shew forth thy praise."
